

Important information about the community

The information in the community area is provided by members of our community like you who wish to share their individual experiences and opinions. User contributions to discussions, personal stories, blogs and profiles are based on the personal opinions and experiences of others. We do not endorse or verify any user contributions on Orthogate and these postings should not be viewed as medical advice. It is up to you to decide whether information posted by others is helpful or important to you, and you should always consult your health care provider before beginning, altering or stopping any treatment or health regimen. You are responsible for any decisions or actions you take based on the information in this area.