

2010-2011 Sports Medicine Fellowship Opportunity in Cincinnati

Last Updated Monday, 29 June 2009

Cincinnati Sports Medicine and Orthopaedic Center has available positions in our RRC/ACGME accredited SportsMedicine, Knee and Shoulder Fellowship for the 2010-2011 fellowship years.

Physicians

who participate in this nationally-acclaimed fellowship receive extensive experience and training in surgery, clinic, academics, and research. The training is accomplished through busy surgical and clinical practices, cadaver dissection, bio-skills laboratory, rehabilitation exposure, on-the-field experience, formal Weekly teaching conferences, and research projects. The highly structured program includes more than 200 hours of didactic lectures on sports medicine, indications, rehabilitation, journal club, dissection-related topics, and biomechanics.

While at the Center, fellows critically review more than 500 published articles which provide a sound scientific base and personal reference library for future decision making in their own practice. The fellowship offers extensive anatomical and bio-skills experience on highly technical and innovative arthroscopic techniques, and complex knee, shoulder, elbow, and ankle surgery.
